

MEDICAL RADIATION TECHNOLOGISTS

To work in British Columbia (BC) as a Medical Radiation Technologist (MRT) you must meet the credentialing, and competency standards in one or more of the four disciplines recognized by the Canadian Association of Medical Radiation Technologists (CAMRT).

CAMRT is the national professional association, and certifying body for MRTs across Canada, and they offer certification in four disciplines: Radiation Technology, Magnetic Resonance, Nuclear Medicine, and Radiation Therapy.

At this time, there is not a provincial regulatory college for MRTs in BC. Membership with our provincial association, CAMRT BC is recommended.

CANADIAN MRTS

If you are a CAMRT certified MRT working elsewhere in Canada, you do not need to meet any additional criteria to work in British Columbia.

If you are a new graduate from an accredited Canadian education program in one of the four CAMRT disciplines, you will be able to start working in British Columbia when you pass the CAMRT Entry-to-Practice Certification Exam for your discipline.

INTERNATIONALLY EDUCATED MRTS

Internationally educated MRTs, including Canadians educated outside of Canada, must undergo the CAMRT assessment process before applying to write the CAMRT Entry-to-Practice Certification Exam.

The CAMRT assessment will evaluate academic credentials, language proficiency, clinical training, and work experience to determine if you meet the competency profile for the discipline you are applying to. An expert reviewer will evaluate your information, and determine if you are eligible to apply to write the CAMRT Entry-to-Practice Certification Exam for your discipline.

It is also important to note that you will need to complete an English language assessment if you were educated in a language other than English as part of the CAMRT assessment process.
