

MEDICAL LABORATORY TECHNOLOGISTS

To work as a Medical Laboratory Technologist (MLT) for a publicly funded health employer in British Columbia, you must be certified by the Canadian Society for Medical Laboratory Science (CSMLS).

At this time, we do not have a provincial regulatory college for MLTs in British Columbia (BC), but membership with the British Columbia Society of Laboratory Science (BCSLS) is recommended.

CANADIAN MLTS

If you graduated from an accredited Canadian MLT program in the last twelve months, you will likely be eligible to challenge the Canadian Society for Medical Laboratory Science (CSMLS) Certification Exam. If successful, you will be eligible for employment with British Columbia (BC) Health Employers.

If you are a CSMLS certified MLT working elsewhere in Canada, you do not have to meet any additional criteria to work in British Columbia (BC). However, if you are currently working in the medical laboratory industry, and are not CSMLS certified, or if you graduated more than twelve months ago, and have not applied to challenge the CSMLS Certification Exams, you will need to complete the CSMLS Prior Learning Assessment (PLA) process.

INTERNATIONALLY EDUCATED MLTS

If you were trained as an MLT outside of Canada, your education and experience do not automatically make you eligible to write the CSMLS Certifying Exams. You will need to complete the Prior Learning Assessment (PLA) process, and receive a valid examination eligibility statement first.

The PLA process evaluates academic credentials, language proficiency, clinical training, and work experience to determine if you meet the CSMLS Competency Profile. Where you do not meet the Competency Profile you will be provided with a customised learning plan you must complete before challenging the CSMLS certifying exam.

It is important to note that CSMLS has a two-stage language proficiency requirement. To have your Technical Report completed by CSMLS, there is one standard, and to write the CSMLS Certification Examination, you must meet a higher standard. TOFEL iBT, IELTS AC & GT and CanTEST are all recognized by CSMLS.
